

URANOMANIAC 2001.1

by Dr. Kevin Balch, Dr. Steven Clay, and Dr. Martin Cohen

From the publishers of URANUSMAXIMUS comes a new, more comprehensive collection: URANOMANIAC 2001.1. This unique ten volume sky atlas expands our knowledge of the universe; it expands even further when wet. This incredible database covers stars to Magnitude 26.5! Nobody before has ever claimed to fully label as many stars (billions and billions, and billions), and non-stellar objects (including color coded close-ups of 112 complete solar systems, Black Holes, and comets coming through the year 2075). And it is very affordable; all ten volumes of this atlas sell for far less than one of today's trendy Space Telescopes.

URANOMANIAC 2001.1 was compiled by the famous team of Dr. Kevin Balch V.M.D., Dr. Steven Clay D.D.S., and Dr. Martin C. Cohen (of Cohen, Dewey Cheatem, and Howe) using the world's only Astro-Physics 7 Meter Multiple Refractor Telescope: 1,521 - 7 inch "Starfire EDF" telescopes working in parallel. The sky photo surveys were conducted over the weekend of July 4, 1988 from Company Seven Astronomiches Institute Observatories located on the heights of lower southeast Washington, D.C., and at a really enlightened southern hemisphere location - Bikini Atoll.

URANOMANIAC 2001.1 was computer plotted by Dr. Apfel MacIntosh, then labeled by the world famous porno cartographer Randy McNally. Celestial objects are in black against a white background. Each volume is 9.1 inches wide and 12.1 inches tall (compare that to common 9 x 12 atlases!), bound into ten 24 inch thick heavy duty hardback books making it convenient to use at your telescope (an excellent counterweight, foot rest, step, ect.).

For a limited time we will include the compact Field Edition FREE! This is the entire ten volume set reduced in size by eliminating the white background and placing remaining print on to only two sheets (27 feet x 27 feet each)!

The forward (written by Dr. Carl Sargon, and Ray Badbury - for a fee of course) is one of the most mushy articles ever composed, and is GUARANTEED to make you cry every time you look up to the Heavens! Also found in Volume I is a lavishly illustrated 327 page biography written by Dr. Martin C. Cohen about Dr. Martin C. Cohen, followed by a tribute from Dr. Steven Clay to Dr. Kevin Balch, and a tribute from Dr. Kevin Balch to Dr. Steven Clay.

URANOMANIC 2001.1 has been well received by critics (well, recieved anyway) - many of them being left speechless:

Sky and Telescope, and Binoculars "beyond words!"

Ill Astronomie "doing wonders for paper company stockholders"

Joe Isuzu - "a monumental work which I'm sure will rival the Bible when viewed by generations to come - you have my word on it"

Physics Yesterday "such a wealth of ___ that discretion disallows a more in depth appraisal"

President George H. W. Bush "a thousand points of light"

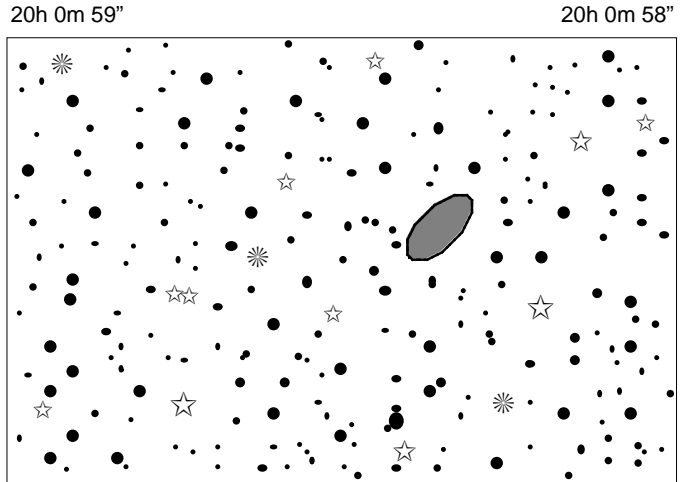

Deep "the wealth that the authors are amassing is impressive"

Alfred E. Neuman "What Me Worry?"

Southeast Laurel Times "Certainly the finest Star Atlas we've reviewed this week"

Roland Christen and Bob Steinberger "You guys are crazy!"

Below is a full scale segment from URANOMANIAC 2001.1, which spans about 2 two Arc Secs. Compare this to what you use now and see what you are missing!

Above: even at first glance it is obvious the stars and galaxies (the brightest shown is only Magnitude 21.7) are charted onto a fraction of the area that is just empty white space on other atlases such as the one below (4 Arc Minute area shown!)
